BEAVERTON OREGON.

INTRODUCTION

Our specialization in peonies began in 1912 with the purchase of the largest collection in the west at that time, and its removal to Beaverton. Each year we have purchased new plants, our aim being to have all varieties of merit. We now have over 500 varieties and while we are ever adding new sorts, we are also ever discarding those that are not specially distinctive or beautiful. We cater to that increasing number of flower lovers who desire only the best, realizing that poor peonies take up the same space in the garden as those of superior merit.

Our peonies begin flowering in early May and continue until July. The best showing, however, is between June 5th and 20th and it is between these dates that you are specially invited to see them. If you have never seen a field of modern peonies in bloom, mere words cannot describe such a sight to you. Suffice is to say that a trip to the nursery at this time will be well worth your while and your visit will probably result in an annual pilgrimage thereafter.

But we have other flowers than peonies. Our bearded iris are at their best for the three weeks previous to the peonies, while the Japanese iris flower immediately after them. During July and August the sixty varieties of phlox, a large number of lilies and other choice perennials, make a visit to the nursery interesting. Then during September and October the hardy asters in thirty varieties also make a fine showing of flower.

We give a well balanced root having three to five eyes. Our plants are grown on a hard clay soil thus making a very firm solid root far superior to plants grown on a more sandy soil.

We aim to give a root which will give bloom the first season after planting, but it should be remembered that peonies get better each year up to about the eighth year after which the roots should be divided and reset. Anyone receiving a peony root from us with which they are not entirely satisfied, will get their money back promptly upon the return of the root. We will furnish small divisions of the rarer varieties—priced at above five dollars—for one-half the price quoted. We prepay parcel post or express charges and make delivery as soon after the first of September as we can fill the orders.

Peonies are best selected from the blooming plants during the first three weeks of June. It is important, however, that selections be made of varieties that bloom at different seasons and in the various assortments of single, Japanese and double flowering varieties. When the selection is left to us, we give the best assortment for the money expended—an assortment which will extend the blooming season over a period of six weeks by including some of the early, midseason, and late flowering varieties. In color, peonies are red, pink and white with all variations in between.

The nursery is located on the Tualatin Valley highway six miles west of Portland and one mile east of Beaverton. Our general nursery catalog "Ornamental Plants for Landscape Gardening" and the special Iris catalog, may be had for the asking.

PEONIES.

From the earliest times the peony has been recognized as the grandest of all flowers, vying with the rose in popular favor. This popularity has been much increased during recent years with the introduction of improved varieties, many of them of American origin. The fact that this flower requires so little care and produces such grand blooms, both for landscape effects in the lawn or for cut flowers in the home, doubtless has had much to do with its increasing popularity.

Peonies are best planted only in autumn—from late August to January. Late spring planting will set the plants back several years and under no circumstances should the plants be disturbed from April to August. Plant in an ordinary soil, first spading the ground into a loose condition and planting so as to cover the eyes with two inches of soil. Too deep planting results in blind shoots, while exposed eyes produce only weak flowers. Plant in full sunlight, away from the roots of trees. For landscape effects mass several plants together, for it is far better to have all the peonies in one place, rather than scattered over the yard as individual specimens.

CULTURAL DIRECTIONS.

Do not fertilize with barnyard manure, or other fertilizer rich in nitrogen. The three important elements in a fertilizer are nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. Nitrogen stimulates the growth of leaf and stem, phosphoric acid promotes flowers and fruit, while potash gives strength to a plant. So when peonies are overfertilized with a nitrogen fertilizer, it produces a growth of many stems all too weak to bear flowers. Peonies need a fertilizer rich in potash and phosphoric acid, rather than nitrogen. Bone meal is the ideal fertilizer for this purpose. As it takes several months for the bone meal to rot and thus become available as a plant food, it is important that it be applied in the autumn. Simply scatter it around each plant, using not more than a half pound to a plant. The dirt around the plants should be kept well spaded in order to retain the soil moisture. Watering during the month previous to blooming, will result in larger flowers.

PEONIES AS CUT FLOWERS.

Peonies will last as cut flowers for a few hours to two weeks depending upon how they are treated. Left in the field until fully open and then cut in direct sunlight on a hot day, it will be only a few hours before the petals begin to drop. But cut in the cool of the day before the buds have fully opened and the stems placed immediately in luke warm water in a rather darkened room where the buds will open only slowly, the flowers will last for fully two weeks. So the buds should be cut before they have opened, allowing them to expand away from sunlight. This method not only makes the most lasting flowers, but preserves the delicate color tints of those varieties which have a tendency to fade in sunlight.

THE PEONY SOCIETY.

Peony lovers are organized into the American Peony Society with over 500 members. This society meets each June in various cities, staging a grand display of flowers in connection with the annual convention. Local exhibits are also held in various cities, with the backing of the Society. A display of our blooms is made each year in connection with the exhibit of the Portland Rose Show and we will be pleased to send blooms to similar flower shows in other localities of the Pacific Northwest.

SCORING AND CLASSIFICATION.

By far the greatest accomplishment of the American Peony Society has been the publication of the Symposium. Every three years the members of the society are asked to score their varieties on a percentage of value basis. The idea is that any variety not really worth cultivation be scored less than 50% and the better the flower the nearer that variety would score to 100% perfection. The Society recommends that any variety scoring below 60 be dropped and that commercial growers publish the scoring of the varieties in their catalogs. Of the four thousand varieties formerly in commerce, less than a thousand score above 60%. But we place a higher standard of perfection for our varieties, as we aim to have none of the double flowering varieties which score under 75%, although many of the singles and Japanese types score less than this figure. We further aim to keep the number of varieties under the 500 mark, but as we are constantly adding new sorts this means that we must constantly discard others. While it is a pleasure to add new varieties of merit to our collection, it is an equal pleasure to discard a variety that proves disappointing. In fact each blooming season means another study of the merits of all varieties in order to see what can be discarded to advantage.

In our list the scoring is placed just before the name of the variety. In some cases no scoring is given, for the reason that these varieties are new and thus not in many collections at the time of the last Symposium.

Peonies are classified as follows:

SINGLE. Those with a single or double row of wide guard petals, and a center of yellow pollen-bearing stamens.

JAPANESE. Those with guard petals same as the singles, but with the center composed of broadened stamens known as stamenoids, or narrowed petals known as petaloids. They are mostly without pollen.

SEMI-DOUBLE. Those with several rows of guard petals, and a center of stamens and partially transformed petaloids.

ANEMONE. A step further in the process of doubling, with the stamens all transformed into short, narrow petals forming a round cushion in the center of the flower.

CROWN. Here the wide petals are developed in the center of the flower, forming a high crown, with the narrow short petals forming a ring or collar around it.

BOMB. More fully double, in which all the center petals are uniformly wide, approaching the guards, but distinctly differentiated from them, forming a globe shaped center without collar or crown.

SEMI-ROSE. Flowers in which the petals are uniformly wide, but are loosely built, generally with a few pollen bearing stamens showing.

ROSE. Completely double with the petals all wide, forming a perfect rose-shaped flower without pollen.

In the description of the varieties, we give the name of the originator, type of flower, color, season and price. Names of the originators are generally abbreviated, thus: Kel. for Kelway; Pl. for Pleas; Des. for Dessert. We realize that the names and descriptions given do not mean much to one not familiar with peonies in trying to make a selection of varieties from a catalog. We have therefore placed * before those varieties which are of special merit for the prices asked for them. In other words, we consider these varieties the best for the money.

We give six plants of a variety for the price of five as an inducement for ordering in quantity.

Early May Flowering Peonies

These are mostly single and include several distinct species as distinct from varieties. A species is a plant found wild in some part of the world, while varieties are produced by crossing. A hybrid is a cross between two species and a variety may be a hybrid or a result of the crossing of two hybrids or two varieties.

As the peonies of this class bloom from one to four weeks earlier than the others, one or two should be included in every collection in order to extend the season of bloom. But as a class they are not of equal value to the others, although of great interest to peony specialists

ANOMALA. A graceful species with fine cut-leaved foliage and rose-lilac flowers. Early May. $3.00.

DECORA FALLASII. Deep rich crimson single flower. $2.00.

OFFICINALIS ROSEA PLENA. Beautiful rose-pink flowers, fully double, flowering the middle of May. $2.00.

OFFICINALIS RUBRA PLENA. Large globular bloom of brilliant crimson, fully double. This is the old fashion "piney" of former years. It is still the best known of any peony and on account of it flowering so early with its splendid bloom, should be included in every collection. $1.00.

Single Peonies

Most people know only the double flowering peonies, but the single varieties are becoming very popular as they become better known. Visitors making their own selections during the blooming season invariably order many of the single varieties. They are mostly early in their season of bloom as compared with the double sorts.

Japanese Peonies

These may be said to be intermediate between the single and double flowers, having two rows of guard petals, with the stamens transformed into narrow petaloids mostly without pollen.

The Japanese peonies are as yet but little known to the general public and our visitors are much enthused with their beauty. The flowers are so different from the double varieties that many order a special collection of only the Japanese varieties.
